Researchers test real-time traffic

UNION CITY, Feb 09, 2008 (Contra Costa Times - McClatchy-Tribune Information Services via COMTEX) -- SRFB | news | PowerRating | PR Charts -- Bay Area residents are already spoiled by the ability to call 511.org and find out how many minutes it will take them to get from Hayward to Fremont, or San Rafael to San Jose for that matter. But what if you needed to gauge the traffic going to Fresno or Lake Tahoe?

Researchers from the UC Berkeley teamed up with wireless hardware maker Nokia and the state transportation department, Caltrans, dispatched 100 Berkeley students to the slings and arrows of Interstate 880 for most of Friday to develop a system that could generate real-time traffic data to nearly anywhere.

The experiment is part of Nokia's effort to "move beyond the realm of phones," said Bob Iannucci, Nokia's chief technology officer, who flew in from the company's headquarters in Finland for the event.

Rather, the company is preparing customers to think of "phones as a sensor for the world that we live in."

The students drove 100 cars borrowed from Enterprise Rent-a-Car along the freeway between Hayward and Fremont while their Nokia N95 smart phones logged data from built-in global positioning system (GPS) devices. The data traveled through the phone's wireless network to the Lowe's hardware parking lot in Union City where research assistants peered into laptops for phone calls from drivers who needed help or instructions.

In a few years, researchers expect that just about all phones sold in the United States will have GPS technology and motorists who carry them will be able to contribute data to a traffic information system much more extensive than anything currently operating in the nation. And the best part is that it won't require expensive infrastructure such as the $100,000 coils of cable Caltrans embeds in freeways every half-mile or the $100 million toll readers the Metropolitan Transportation Commission's 511 system now uses to monitor traffic congestion in the Bay Area.

The system is expensive to deploy, they are expensive to maintain and they only cover a limited area. "I'm not saying you shouldn't do something like this; I'm saying people need to be informed about what's done with the data," Weinstein said. "You need to ask if its being collected and how long is it going to be archived."

Some motorists have been suspicious of how they might be tracked with FasTrak tags, suspicions that were confirmed last June when records requested by MediaNews showed that the Metropolitan Transportation Commission released electronic toll payers' bridge crossing records in civil court proceedings.

"This same technology," Weinstein warned, "with nothing but a policy decision, could be used in the same way as red-light cameras."

Bayen agreed that privacy is paramount, saying that the new system would scramble the actual identification numbers of cell phones and once a vehicle's progress was recorded, that bit of information would be discarded.

"From a privacy standpoint, the less information given, the better," he said. "Cell-phone users will have the option to turn off the service if they don't want to use it or they don't want their data sent."

Even so, Weinstein said users of the system need to be informed that a judge's order could well force the purveyors of the traffic information to alter those protections and start collecting more specific data on wireless users.
